As a rule the complain of the disadvantages of Hongkong, tendency of local administration in the Colony has been singularly forgetful of the they might be very materially reduced wants of the large body of the community. | - and it is to be hoped that now that The most obvious necessities in the form of the term of residence of most people is likely roads and buildings have been supplied to to be much longer than formerly, something the common benefit of residents, as it would may be done to render available the advanbe simply impossible to get on without them, but in minor matters, where the comfort of those of moderate means is concerned, and with their comfort, in a great degree, their health, there has not, in an ordinary way been anything like the amount of consideration which might very reasonably be looked for. This is, of course, to be expected in some degree in a Colony where the form of Government is but very slightly of a popular The necessities of those who are not so fortunately placed as members of the Government service, or those whose means conble them to supply all their wants in regard to comfort in residence, and necessary change and recreation, are very apt to be forgotten above date, 1,030 chests Malwa, and 1,110 chests settled; that was to say, was he prepared to when the management of affairs is exclusive- Bengal. Hence many opportunities of improving Hougkong as a place of residence, and rendering the long exile, to which large numbers are subjected, less irksome, have been overlooked. To the Government servant, who, if he fall sick, can at once obtain his leave of absence on full pay, and fly away to more congenial slimes, and who has long furlough at reasonable periods, and to the well to do merchants. bankers, and other mercantile men who are been affixed up to last evening. By the kind able from time to time to recruit their health. in a similar manner, it is of comparatively · little importance whether Hongkong be a more or less healthy or pleasant place of abode. To those, however, who are not so favourably situated the matter may be almost literally of vital consequence, and it is surprising that, with all the money that has been squandered in Hongkong, and with all the facilities which for both objects in the Colony, no general tee, the boundry line at Kowloon city, and Sanatorium up the Hills, or suitable bathing place at some convenient situation has vet been set on foot.

At last, however, there seems a prospect fliat something will be done in this desirable direction. For some time, we have advocate loaded pietols and a loaded musket form an ed the establishment of some kind of Sanatorium at the Peak, or high enough up the ed to "withdraw the charges" (in the pistols) bills to get out of the worst of the Summer | before laying them on a Court table for heat, and we pointed out that there was little ignorant Asiatios to handle, as surely a conchance of this being accomplished except he taken. The Colonial-Secretary had but the brew saved.

Lvote down as for a Saustorium for Civil Servants, but the Hon. Mr. Rowert called attention to the fact that the vote proposed was not especially for civil servants, but for the object above-named of making a Sanatorium available to the general public. The fact is that, for such reasons as are above indicated, the civil servants are precisely those who least require such an establishment, especially as many of them are already able to have the use of the Bachelors' quarters attached to the Governor's Bungalow, upon which a considerable sum has already been expended. To the public at large the means of obtaining the use of suitable quarters for a short period during the hot season at the Peak will be of incalculable advantage, and will greatly lessen the rigours of the Hongkong Summer. When once a start has been made, we may be certain that many will build private retreats on the hills, who naturally hesitate to do so at present on account of the want of security and the too great isolation, which would be removed so soon as the place came into requisition by the establishment of a Government Sanatorium. Before many years we should probably find a large number of small bungalows at the more convenient situations, and there would be nothing to prevent Hongkong residents from retreating during three months of the year to the heights after the labours of the day, and spending their evenings and nights in an atmosphere not much hotter than that of any ordinary European place during the Summer mouths. The effect of this upon the health of residents in the Colony, and on their ability to remain for a longer period of years, would portant direction its benefits could hardly be overestimated. So soon as a fair number of residents resorted to the heights, the lidies could, as they do in India; retire to them en-Summer months when the atmosphere is dry and the weather in every way suitable—and this would in all likelihood be quite sufficient to make the climate of Hongkong without any serious effects, and do away with the necessity of expensive trips at home which are not likely at best to have so good on effect in restoring health, as timely precaution would have in preserving it. TOWN PLAYGROUNDS.

There are few pleasanter sights to the Lonloner who lives at home at ease than these playgrounds, where the wretched little denizers of fetid alleys and foul dwellings forget in the sunlight and the companionship of their kind the sorrows of their lot, and shout together in their games as though all the world were young. There is a sort of freemasonry in the pustimes of boyhood which seems to equalize conditions. The little lad let loose from a National School is not so far in sympathy from the Harrow boy when he is at cricket as at any other moment of his forlorn existence. Surely there is something indescribably sad in the thought of children growing up without over playing a game, except perhaps marbles or pitch and tose in the corner of a noisome court, or leapfrog in a passage. The "street Arabs," and the gutter children who turned somersaults in search of halfpence before the Bohool Boards picked them up, were bred and trained for begging or crime, not only for want of food and schooling, but for want of room to play in. We are all proud of the splendid physical education of our public schoolboys, and we willingly attribute to the Eton playing fields, and to the opportunities of healthful out-of-door recreation at Harrow and Winchester, some of the soundest qualities of English gentlemen. It may be that athleticism is somewhat abused, and that the pursuit of distinction in games is carried to excess at these femous institutions. But no one our doubt that this disciplined and regulated bodily exerolse is a powerful instrument of moral training also wears young minds from victous tastes and temptations, and makes healthy hearts and minds as well as healthy nerves and limbs.

Two thousand cigara which they had smoked one hundred and fifty chests. and to the exact share in the reckoning which each had paid. There was something about all this a little too circumstantial; and it was for the jury to say whether they believed the story-especially when they took into account the fact that Lady Radeliffe had eworr that, while Roger was staying at Tichborne, never went out in the evening, and passed his time chiefly in the drawing room. And so, leaving Mr. Lewis, his Lordship went on to the evidence of Miss Braine, against whom, he thought, heavier ordnance had been directed than was altogether called for by the import ance of her evidence. She had been governoss to Miss Doughty, and had seen Roger Tichborne on only one occasion—at the Christmas of 1849.50, when he came of age. Roger had then remained at Tichborne for some eight o nine days, and Miss Braine had only seen him ON LONDON. at breakfast and atdinaer-time, and in the drawing-room in the evening. She had, no doubt, sworn to the defendant as Roger Tichborne. But ber evidence would hardly carry much weight or authority, and he (the Lord Chief-Justice) could not but think that poor Miss Braine had been a little hardly treated. Dr. Kenealy had enlogised ber as a paragon of virtue, as a pattern to her sex, as a model of all that was good and mobile. There was something in all this rather inflated and extravagant. Mr. Hawkins, . coutra, had in his attack upon Miss Braine gone a little too far. He, the Lord Chief-Justice, bolding the scales evenly between the two parties, desired to call the attention of the jury to the fact that Miss Braine had been Lady Radcliffe's governess; that she had niways professed for her pupil the sincerest attachment and regard; that she knew the defendant had openly stated that while in his uncle's house he had basely and wickedly abused the confidence placed in him by seducing his cousin; that, notwithstanding all this, she had been for months an inmate of the defendant's house, that she had partaken of his hospitality, and had in no way altered her relations with him. Such conduct showed but little delicacy. or of those feelings which, under such circomstances, a lady ought to entertain. If the

It must be remem-Bered that Colonel Custance, Captain Sher- Woo-shun-hing to travelling trader. stone, Colonel Sawyer, Major Heyward, and Sir Talbot Constable, had all given evidence in favour of the defendant at the recent trial in Common Pleas, and had none of them been called by Dr. Kenealy. This was a significant J. (Successor to Dr. V. D. COLLINS.) fact, and Dr. Kenenly had had no right to tell the jury that none of the defendant's old supporters had fallen off from him. But, on the other hand, it could not be denied that in favour of the defendant a strong body of cyldenee had been given by the Hongkong and China by Messrs. J. & R. Tennon-commissioned officers, and privates of the Carabineers. The testimony of those " pore Arbroath. fellows" his lordship now proceeded to take seriation, and to touch upon the old stories, with which the public is already familiar, of the donkey in the bed, and the dirty sword, and the two men who got drunk at Cahir, and the grey horse which belonged to the trumpeter, and the barrack-muster's wig, and the extrathree days' drill, and the fighting cock, and the stuble which took fire at Fermoy. It seemed murvellers, his lordship pointed out, that the defendant should have remembered all these things. But-and here his lordship evidently referred to the statulory declaration made at Sydney, to the "66th Light Dragoone," to "Colonel Wilson," to the defendant's assertion that he had "only been a private," and to other euch matters it was only to have been expeoted that the man who had evided this minute knowledge of trivial details of regimental history, should have remembered other matters equally and indeed far more important.

If you walk up to a Lapp, uncouthly squatted before his tent, Kwangtong his very first salutation is made by stretching | Massilla. forth a tuwny hand and demanding, in a Norna whining tone, "Tabak" or "Braendi." Dr. Clarke relates an amusing instance of their propensity for spirituous liquors. On his very first visit to one of their tents, he gave the father of the family about a pint of brandy, Too Morton thinking he would busband it with greatcare, Travancore as he had seen him place it behind him, upon White Cloud & his bed, near the skirting of the tent. The daughter now entered, and begged for a taste of the brandy, as she had lost her share by being absent. The old man made no answer. but when the request was repeated, he slily crept round the outside of the tent, until he came to the spot where the brandy was. when, thrusting his arm beneath the skirting he drew it out, and swallowed the whole contents of the bottle at a draught.-The Polar World.
